Food Stamp Program Will Stick If Plan Steps Up Retail Sales

WASHINGTON — It will be six months or thereabouts before the Department of Agriculture knows whether the food distribution stamp idea, now being tried out in Rochester, N. Y., is really coming up to expectations. And even then, the way the retailers use the stamps to buy food won't be the determining factor.

Special Election May Be Called by Governor Bailey

Would Let People Voice Opinions on Contested Acts

CIRCULATE PETITION Sales Tax and Workmen's Compensation Acts Would Be Voted On

LITTLE ROCK—Governor Bailey will call a special election "to let the people settle once for all" the fate of the sales tax, workmen's compensation and venue-change acts if valid referendum petitions are filed, State Representative John Henry Mitchum of Independence county said after a conference with the governor Thursday.

"The governor prefers to let the people vote on these important measures," Representative Mitchum said. "He feels that would be a fairer plan than to call a special session of the legislature. I had favored a special session to enact emergency clauses on the acts, thereby making them operative at once. But Governor Bailey insisted the individual voters should be given the final word."

The special election will be called after referendum petitions are checked thoroughly," Mr. Mitchum said. "The governor wanted again that he would prosecute any persons found guilty of obtaining illegal signatures."

Signers Being Checked

J. Charles Linthicum, president and lawyer for the Arkansas Taxpayers Association, which was formed to circulate petitions to refer the sales tax law, said:

"I don't blame the governor for checking the signatures. We are doing the same. Each signer is being certified by the county clerk before his signature is accepted."

Two representatives of the association who are circulating the petitions are meeting "some opposition," Mr. Linthicum said. He said he was unable to say when the required 8,241 signatures may be obtained.

State Labor Department officials received reports that the workmen's compensation referendum petitions are being signed by many persons in the western Arkansas coal field districts.

Filing of valid referendum petitions with the secretary of state would automatically nullify the contested acts until referred to the people. The proposed special election would obtain action without waiting until the general election is held in November 1940.

Article in Tulsa Paper

Governor Bailey only smiled and refused to discuss the matter when told that the Tulsa (Okla.) Tribune had published a front page article saying that the governor had left the good will party of the Arkansas Chamber of Commerce because he was unwilling to leave the state for fear that Lieut. Gov. Bob Bailey "would call the legislature into special session to change some of the governor's pet laws."

However, close friends of the governor said the report was absurd and pointed to the fact that he is planning to attend a conference in Memphis Saturday. They also recalled that the lieutenant governor has said repeatedly that he intended to take no action of importance on occasions when he is acting governor and that he has been consistent in adhering to this policy.

Cotton Planting About Complete in Arkansas

The bureau said that the work was progressing rapidly in most sections except some northern counties where the soil is too wet and cold for planting.

Mock Attack by Planes Staged On Tiny Island

HONOLULU.—(P)—A complete blackout of the strategic Oahu island by its civilians in less than two minutes Friday prevented 52 "enemy" war planes from staging a successful surprise "attack."

Major General Charles D. Herron, Hawaii department commander, flying one of the "raiding" planes, described the blackout as a "complete success."

Answers on Page Two

Since non-relief people won't be getting any of the orange and blue stamps the plan doesn't directly affect them at all. Indirectly, however, Agricultural Department economists hope that it will affect the money much.

Will Prices Go Up?

In effect, the stamp scheme adds 50 per cent to the weekly foodbuying power of the relief clients. In the Rochester, where 20,000 families are getting some form of relief, a tremendously rough estimate has it that the grocers will sell something like $15,000 worth of food a week beyond what they have been selling.

As the demand rises, the grocers will naturally handle a greater volume of the various foodstuffs officially designated as "surplus"; hence, they will be able to reduce their margins and cut prices. As they do this, non-relief buying of these commodities can be expected to increase.

That at any rate, is the theory. If it doesn't work out that way, by next fall, it is found that the stamp scheme has been very nice for the relief clients and the grocers, but no good to anybody else—then the plan will, in all probability, be abandoned as a failure.

As the department sees it, the only way in which buying food for relief people at retail prices can be justified is through a narrow price margin which will lead to lower retail price levels and to wider consumption by the general public.

There is already some reason to hope that it may work out that way.

Dr. F. V. Waugh, head of the Division of Marketing Research in the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, was in Rochester when the stamp plan officially got under way there. He talked with many grocers, among them the head of the largest grocery chain in the city. This man said his chain had already begun a price-cutting experiment in one of the "surplus" commodities.

Corn Meal Experiment

According to this grocer, the chain had been carrying corn meal at a 100 per cent mark-up; in other words, the retail price was double the wholesale price. In ordinary times, that was a fair enough spread; but corn meal moves rather slowly and requires a substantial mark-up to make it profitable to handle.

But since corn meal is one of the eight commodities on which the Rochester relief clients must spend their blue stamps, it is likely to move a good deal faster now. So the chain has cut the retail price one-third, and is waiting to see what happens.

The Bureau of Agricultural Economics is making elaborate plans to check up on the results of the Rochester experiment. For one thing, it will collect complete figures on the shipment into Rochester by train and truck of the foodstuffs involved.

For another, it will pick a few "sample" stores in different parts of the city and make a week-by-week study of their sales records to show actually being bought. To compare with these figures, statistics will be obtained, running a couple of years back, to show how those commodities move ordinarily.

Plan's Spread Expected

Meanwhile, the department is gathering data on other cities where the experiment may be started. Use of the stamps is the get under way in Dayton, probably within a fortnight, beyond that, no city has been definitely selected, although 35 or 40 are under consideration.

The foodstuffs officially designated as "surplus" will undoubtedly be changed from time to time. At present the list includes butter, eggs, dry beans, dried prunes, oranges, grapefruit, flour (both white and whole wheat) and corn meal. Later on the list may be varied to take care of local, seasonal surpluses.

Bureau officials are confident that to make the plan work by cutting retail prices wherever increased demand makes cut necessary. For a long time the grocer has felt that the relief system didn't give him a fair break.

Jew Resistance in Palestine Abated

British Constable Left Dead and 114 Other Persons Injured

JERUSALEM.—(P)—Palestine's aroused Jewry resorted Friday to a passive resistance campaign of no cooperation and economic pressure in an attempt to thwart British plans to set up an Arab state in the Holy Land with Jews in the minority.

Mass demonstrations which followed the announcement of Britain's Palestine policy Wednesday had abated Friday, leaving a British constable dead and 114 other persons injured, according to an official recapitulation.

California to Vote On Pension Scheme

SACRAMENTO, Calif.—(P)—California will vote again on the $30-a-year-Thursdays old age pension plan. Presented by the California Farmers Union, the measure, bearing more than 1,000,000 names, Gov. Culbert L. Olson said he would call a special state election on the proposal, defeated in last year's general election, after the legislature adjourns next month.

Proponents of the measure, providing for distribution each week of 30 one dollar state warrants to every nonworking resident over 50, overhauled some of the provisions before reviving their campaign.

Chamberlain May Offer New Peace Plan for Europe

Calls On Hitler to Renounce Policy of Aggression

POLES HINT PEACE May Attempt to Adjust Quarrel With Germany in Peaceful Way

LONDON, England.—(P)—Prime Minister Chamberlain offered Friday to lay down a definite long range policy for European peace if Germany would renounce in a convincing way her "intention of aggression or further use of force" in relations with other countries.

Speaking in foreign affairs debate in the House of Commons, Chamberlain said, however, Britain is "not prepared to buy peace with concessions which only lead to further demands."

He was replying to David Lloyd George, war-time Prime Minister, who demanded a speedy conclusion of an alliance with Soviet Russia, and Clement R. Attlee, leader of the labor opposition who urged a clear, firm foreign policy.

Chamberlain declared the German government itself was responsible for lack of faith in its assertion of non-aggressive intentions.

Poles Hint Peace

BERLIN.—(P)—A conciliatory gesture from Warsaw gave rise to hope that the quarrel between Poland and Germany might be adjusted by peaceful negotiation. This hope for ending the dispute over Germany's demand for return to Danzig and a right of way across Poland was based on the comment of the official Gazeta Polska that a "reasonable settlement" should be possible.

Informed Germans were not particularly optimistic. Officials remarked that Warsaw's conciliatory words were not yet backed by substantial suggestions of what a "reasonable settlement" would be.

The reasonable settlement for which Poland now is grasping is exactly what Germany has been wanting all along," said a Propaganda Ministry spokesman. "The Fuehrer in all his discussions of the Polish problem never mentioned the word 'war'."

Colonial Demands Renewed

With increasing vigor, Nazis voiced demands for return of German colonies.

"We demand return of the lost," Gen. Franz von Epp, Reichsfuehrer Hitler's deputy in colonial matters, shouted at a mass meeting of the German Colonial Association in Vienna.

As the second session of the Colonial Congress ended with a demonstration by 100,000 persons, General von Epp gave Australian officials old flags of German prewar colonial defense troops to be draped with black mourning crepe "until justice has been vindicated by the return of the colonies."

Reports persisted that Hitler, completing his inspection of fortifications along the western frontier, next week would go to the Polish border to examine eastern defenses.

Troop movements along the western frontier, subject of anxious comment in France, were acknowledged openly. Specialized troops, it was said, were moved into advanced positions to demonstrate the way in which the fortification system would be used.

Dr. Bowen First to Advocate New Baptist Building

Actual Construction of $15,000 Structure Under Rev. Rogers

DEDICATION SUNDAY All-Day Program and Homecoming Planned This Sunday

The First Baptist Educational Building which is to be dedicated Sunday has been a product of Christian faith and creation of and payment for this structure is full of modern romance.

The first real serious consideration of a new building to care for the growing work of First Baptist church came during the pastorate of Dr. W. A. Bowen 10 years ago. Dr. Bowen sought to convince the leadership of the church that a new auditorium and Educational Building could and should be built at once in one unit. The members of the church felt that the task was too great for them to undertake during the uncertain times of depression.

"Pay As You Go"

During the pastorate of the Rev. Wallace R. Rogers a committee was appointed to consider recommending the erection of an Educational Building. This committee reported unfavorably. A second committee was later appointed. This committee also felt that it would be impossible for the church to pay for the kind of building which was needed.

Finally, a third committee was appointed and along about then came a fire which destroyed one of the buildings which was being used for Sunday School purposes. Quickly a decision was made to tear down the other buildings and recommend erection of a modern educational plant on the "pay as you go" basis. Sunday school classes met in nearby buildings for more than a year.

Actual construction began late in 1934. Slowly but surely the building rose from the foundation to its present beautiful completeness. The Rev. Rogers was a moving spirit throughout the entire period of construction. His optimistic determination kept even the conservative members of the church thinking "it can be done."

Is Modern Structure

Early in 1936 it became evident that it would be necessary to borrow money to complete the building at once if the weather was not to damage seriously what had already been built. After consideration was given to several sources, it was finally decided to borrow the money locally.

A loan of $7,000 was secured on May 15, 1936. This amount covered all bills outstanding for material and labor at that time.

Altogether, including the loan, the special Building Fund Committee spent $11,000 in the erection of the Educational Building. Many small donations and a few large ones, however, of material and labor, were made directly by individuals and groups bringing the total cost of the building to more than $15,000. According to conservative estimates, it would be difficult to replace it today for $25,000.

This brick veneer Educational Building is considered to be one of the best structures for its purpose anywhere in Southwest Arkansas. Together with the class rooms available in the old auditorium it will house a Sunday school of 500 average attendance. The steady participation of an open Sunday school organization and the gradual increase in average attendance give promise that within a few years the two buildings will be filled and a new auditorium with additional adult class rooms will become necessary.

Texas Threatens To Lift "Oil Lid"

Wide-Open Production of Oil Unless Other States Put Curb On

AUSTIN, Texas.—(P)—Recommendation that the state railroad commission order "wide-open" production for Texas oil fields beginning in July—unless Louisiana and Illinois in the meantime effectively cut allowances of their pools—was made by Jerry Sadler, commission member.

Sadler, complained those states were threatening stability of the industry in Texas and asserted Texas "should not continue to hold the bag much longer."

He pointed to the current Texas order for shut-ins on all Sundays in May and June, and on two Saturdays in each month.

"While some oil producing states prorate and some do not," Sadler said, "none of them carry out the proration laws to the extent Texas does, so the time for a showdown must not be put off much longer."

The commissioner announced he had received information that an oversupply of crude, most of it from Louisiana, had accumulated on the Texas seacoast and Illinois production was moving into East Texas, discriminating against local producers.

Sentence Felton Girl

LITTLE ROCK.—(P)—Sharply censuring a Lonoke county jury that acquitted her on a first degree murder charge two years ago, Federal Judge Hearshill Ragon Friday sentenced Bernice Felton, 20, of Rockford, Ill., companion of the notorious Lester Brockelhurst, to five years in prison on three federal charges in connection with the hitch-hike slaying of Victor A. Gates, Little Rock landowner, May 6, 1937.

Miss Felton, appearing in court with her 17-month-old daughter and her parents, pleaded guilty to charges of transporting Gates' stolen automobile interstate, fleeing across the state line to avoid prosecution herself and to avoid testifying against Brockelhurst.

Gates was shot to death and his body thrown into a roadside ditch near Lonoke. The 23-year-old Brockelhurst and Miss Felton were captured in Gates' car in New York state a week later. Brockelhurst, a resident of Galesburg, Ill., calmly admitted killing Gates and told from the witness stand, of killing two other men in Texas and Illinois on an extended "crime tour" that ended with capture of the pair.

The girl obtained acquittal on the murder charge when she testified she accompanied Brockelhurst because she feared for her own life.

Citizenship, a Dignified Status, Met With Dignity

Republican government prefers generally to get along with out the uniforms, the stiff formalities, the pageantries, which have in the past been associated with monarchy and today are part and parcel of authoritarian government.

But there is such a thing as being too casual about even republican government and its responsibilities. A little ceremonial, conducted on a democratic and informal level, is sometimes a good thing in reminding citizens of the dignity that goes with their citizenship.

That is why it will be interesting to watch the ceremonies to be held in Manitowish, Wis., on Sunday, May 21. On that day, Manitowish plans to try out a scheme to impress on new citizens the dignity of their newly-acquired status. Practically every young man and woman in the country recently turned 21 years old will assemble in the high school bowl overlooking Lake Michigan.

There more than 700 of them will formally take their places among the electorate of the republic by repeating after Chief Justice Marvin B. Rosenberry a solemn oath to support the constitutions of the United States and of their state. Bands will play, flags will whip the breeze; the state governor will speak and present to the chairman of each of 38 citizenship classes a certificate of citizenship for his group.

Five months of preparation have gone into the making of the ceremony. County and municipal officials, business men and school teachers have been conducting the classes by wars and townships, following an outline of instruction that has been the dream of Dr. R. J. Colbert of the University of Wisconsin for many years.

Justice Rosenberry commented that "there are today in the world literally millions of people who would give everything they possess for the privilege of calling themselves American citizens. We who are born under the flag should be equally appreciative."

"We have finally succeeded," Dr. Colbert said, "in dramatizing citizenship in such a way that practically everybody is becoming citizenship conscious. I feel that we have in our hands here an idea that can, if properly handled, be developed into the most healthy movement that ever took root in our country."

"It might well be so. To be an American citizen is in today's world a privilege and a mark of dignity. To approach the privileges and the responsibilities of that citizenship in a dignified and conscious manner instead of merely sliding into it unheeding, should make for better citizenship. And better citizenship is, in the final analysis, the best hope for this or any other country."

No nation, no country, no system, can rise far or stay long above the level of its citizenship. This Wisconsin group has gone to the very heart of the future of free government.

Oxygen-Laden Red Blood Cells Required for Muscular Activity

This is the last of five articles on the effect of exercise on the body.

It's the night of a championship prize fight. Two fine specimens of physical fitness attack each other with their fists for 15 grueling rounds. Next day you read that each of the gladiators will take a three-month rest before resuming even light training.

But do you know why they were ordered to the sidelines? Were they worn out? Yes, but the answer can be found in an examination of what happened to their blood during the battle.

With each jab, each blow absorbed, each round, each knockdown, those fighters used up an abnormally large number of the red blood cells in their bodies.

If you are an average man or woman, during your average day you destroy in work and play, according to one expert, 450,000,000 red blood cells, about one-sixtieth of the total number. But you are constantly building new ones and are existing yourself nowhere near as much as the fighters.

J. C. Porterfield & Son.

It would take about two months to replace all the red blood cells in the body of a person performing just an average day's work.
Men have an average of 5,000,000 red blood cells for every cubic millimeter of blood; women 4,500,000. Anywhere between 4,100,000 and 6,300,000 is normal for a man, between 3,600,000 and 5,000,000 for a woman.

You need plenty of red blood cells because they carry the oxygen which is absolutely necessary for muscular activity. The red blood cells have within them a substance called hemoglobin, red coloring matter. The oxygen becomes attached to the hemoglobin and is released to the cells of the body.
Also in the blood are white cells, varying in number from 5000 to 7000 for each cubic millimeter of blood. They protect the body against germs and assist in various other functions as the protective agency of the body. They increase slightly in number during exercise, digestion and cold baths. The volume of blood in your body is largely responsible for your resistance. If you are fat, one-third of your body weight may be blood. If you are thin, the percentage may be one-twentieth. The short-windedness of fat persons is attributed to this fact.

When you exercise, the number of red blood cells in the blood near the surface of the body definitely increases. The amount of red material in the red blood cells may also be increased, perhaps as a result of the concentration of the blood that occurs in association with exercise. If you sweat, the blood becomes more concentrated and thereby more efficient within certain limits.
The efficiency of the flow of blood through blood vessels is dependent largely on the size and efficiency of your heart. Unless the heart is functioning well, the blood will not flow through your blood vessels as it should, and there will not be available to the tissues or cells the oxygen that is required.

Mrs. Sid Henry

I build a hundred houses while I drive a thousand miles.
A hundred different houses in a hundred different styles.
A house is built and furnished in the twinkling of an eye.
I've lived in it and loved it while the car is passing by.
The beams are beams and wishes and the walls are empty air.
And no one sees my houses, though to me they're really there.
There's moss between the flagstones and there's ivy on the walls.
To blaze in scarlet splendor when the frost begins to fall.
There are mockingbirds for neighbors and one lone whippoorwill.
The house is cuddled snugly in an elbow of the hill.
It is not enough to build the house; I furnish it as well.
And muse away the speeding miles beneath a dreamer's spell.
By laying rug-rug carpets in the bedrooms and the hall.
With shaggy skins before the hearth where sleepy dogs can sprawl.

Arkansas Exhibit Attracting Many

Only One Other State Has Had More Exhibit Visitors

By M. C. BLACKMAN
(State Publicity Director)

Only one other state—Washington—has had more exhibit visitors at the New York World's Fair than Arkansas, according to figures compiled by Gen. D. E. Nolen, director of states' participation.

As a result of this attendance, requests for further information about Arkansas have been received from 25 states and two foreign countries.

The attendance survey showed that visitors remained longer in the Arkansas exhibit than in any other state's. One reason for this is the motion picture about Arkansas, shown in a little 72-seat theater which is a part of the exhibit. The seats are comfortable and the show is interesting, so they stay and are rested and informed at the same time.

Incidentally, there has been some misunderstanding regarding the nature and extent of the difficulty with the motion picture operators' union at the exhibit. So far there has been no trouble and we hope there is none. We merely served notice on the Fair management that we intended to operate our little 16 mm automatic machine with our own Arkansas personnel.

The machine needs no operator, unless otherwise, but we did go in with the hundreds of other exhibitors and agree to pay our proportion to share of $150 per week for a union operator to "service" our machine. Our cost would have been about $21 a week.

Then, two days before the Fair opened, the union repudiated the signed agreement and went back to its original demand that full-time union operators be employed at a cost of $150 per week for each machine.

We do not have that kind of money to pay for services we don't need and wouldn't use, so we announced we would close up and go home before we would pay it. So far we are still operating and getting the crowds.

Typical of the reaction of Arkansas visitors to the exhibit is this telegram to Chairman C. E. Palmer from John Branstetter, speaker of the House of Representatives:

"Am highly gratifying with Arkansas exhibit and especially pleased with picture. I feel we have more to offer in the way of good program than any state exhibit I saw today. Many favorable comments were heard. Congratulations to you and associates."

Morris Sanders, Arkansas-born architect who designed the exhibit, telegraphed:

"Your exhibit running smoothly and is satisfactorily attracting and holding crowds. Congratulations to Commission and yourself."

The morning worship service will begin at 10:45 a. m. At this service the note and mortgage on the Educational Building will be burned and the dedication sermon will be preached by the Rev. Wallace R. Rogers. At noon an old-fashioned basket dinner will be held at the church.

The afternoon service begins at 2 p. m. Several local men will speak and Dr. Lemuel Hall will bring a sermon on "Things That Accompany Salvation."

Baptist Training Union meets at 7 p. m. The evening worship service begins at 8 p. m. with a special sermon by Dr. T. D. Brown.

All seemed to be happy in our Bible study last Sunday as our new class rooms were ready for use, and each class had a room to itself. 10 o'clock is the hour to begin. Every member of the classes should try to bring some one with you, so we can double our attendance.

Sunday evening we will conclude our lessons on the subject, "The Church that Jesus Built." Sunday morning our subject will be, "Church Discipline," and Sunday night we will give a summary of all the lessons presented on the subject. So if you have not heard these lessons, you can get an idea of them by being with us next Sunday morning and evening.

Romance of the Rails

A grand frontier love that grew with the building of the first transcontinental railroad is shared by Barbara Stanwyck and Joel McCrea, handsome screen couple, in "Union Pacific." Cecil B. De Mille's new American panorama. In the film, which Paramount will present Sunday, Monday and Tuesday at the Saenger theater, Miss Stanwyck plays the daughter of the "U. P.'s" first engineer; McCrea a hardy trouble-shooter of the prairies. Among others cast are Akim Tamiroff and Lynne Overman.

Jam Session

When it comes to getting "down to the very bricks," Bob Hope, Shirley Ross and Gene Krupa, No. 1 Drummer, have the formula in Paramount's "Some Like It Hot." Paramount's new comedy slanted the swing way, opening Wednesday at the Saenger theater. "It means they'll send moviegoers with swing and comedy."

New Comedy With Accent on Swing Holds Promise of New Hit Tunes; Offers Drummer in First Starring Role

Swing-mad America, and even that portion of the population not overcome by "hot jitter" and "solid jive," will stamp their feet to irresistible rhythm and rock to clever comedy when Paramount's "Some Like It Hot" opens on Wednesday at the Saenger theater.

Speaking in the picturesque patois of the jitterbugs, the comedy of the picture is just as much "in the groove" as the music. It's dispensed by Bob Hope, screen and radio jester who has kept the country laughing ever since motion picture authorities recognized his talent for humor. Needless to say, Bob promises no letdown in the calibre of his quips. He's as sparkling as ever in his own distinctive lantern-jawed way.

Lovely Shirley Ross is a clever foil for the comedy of Hope. Cast with Bob for the third time, she again demonstrates that she is one of the outstanding sweet-swinging singers in the country. And she and Bob are given ample opportunity to sing in the style which made so popular in "Thanks for the Memory" and "Big Broadcast of '38."

The picture marks the debut as a screen star of Gene Krupa, known to all "alligators," "cats" and "jitterbugs" as the "king of the hide-beaters." In other words, lovers of swing recognize him as the No. 1 drummer-boy of the nation. Of course, his band is featured with him in the picture, and connoisseurs rate them high on the list of the nation's swing bands. Krupa will be remembered as the drummer who was such a sensation with Benny Goodman, and who left Benny to start his own band only last year. Riding high on the wave of popularity, his performance in "Some Like It Hot" should entrench him more firmly than ever in the hearts of swing music lovers. When he drums, he goes "out of the world," jitterbugs for a performance that is the ultimate in swing.

WASHINGTON — We don't pretend to know everything—well, not quite—and when affairs in Europe begin to get out of hand we rush to certain wise men hereabouts, to compare notes. And our sagacious man helped us to the startling conclusion that affairs in Europe are too muddled for war.

There was a time a few weeks back when the business was simpler. It appeared to be shaping into a conflict of the democracies against the dictatorships.

On the other hand, the totalitarian nations, more especially Germany, were fighting for the freedom of Germanic people from the yoke of the tough little nations surrounding her.

But more recently both issues were clouded. England and France began dicker for the assistance of Russia, a country which is not regarded as a leading democracy.

Germany Grabs
Then Germany, instead simply of setting about welding Germanic peoples together, suddenly extended her apron to cover a very large covey of Czechs and Slovaks.

Hitler points to a strange historical parallel which he may have intended should have a bearing on the present situation.

In September of 1918, while the German lines were slowly backing up under the eager pounding of the American and allied armies, Field Marshal von Ludendorff abruptly became panicky. Germany, he urged, must ask for an armistice.

President Wilson had advanced a suggested "peace without victory" based on 14 points. Ludendorff insisted that an armistice be asked, with the 14 points as the basis of discussion.

But civil authorities felt that with a last ditch stand they might negotiate better terms. They wanted to move more slowly, to avoid the appearance of panic. But Ludendorff and Hindenburg overrode their resistance.

Ludendorff explained that he hoped to emerge from the negotiations with his armies intact. One of his staff officers, Colonel Heye, urged that the negotiations be drawn out, saying: "I want to save the army, so that we can use it as a means of pressure during the peace negotiations."

Beverage Alcohol and the Home
Text: Jeremiah 35:1-10; Ephesians 5:15-21; 6:1-4

Temperance lessons are particularly needed at a time when the nation has been in reaction from legislation concerning the liquor traffic, and when habits of drinking have been so widely revived and have taken hold even in homes and among groups of people that a few years ago would have had nothing to do with alcohol.

It is generally recognized that a great deal of the good results attained in the long course of temperance propaganda in this country has been nullified by this reaction and by the whole spirit of the times, which emphasizes the trend toward excitement and the demand for artificial stimulation.

In times like these, it is well to take a long view and to get a right perspective. The Bible has to say very much in attaining that, for here in this blit that comes out of the intimate life of ancient times and ancient peoples we have enforced again and again, the elemental facts and truths which our generation is tending to ignore concerning the nature and effects of strong drink.

Perhaps we should put it a little more on the positive and constructive side, and stress what the Bible says concerning the good effect of sobriety and abstinence from everything that weakens and destroys human will and morale.

This is positive side is brought before us in many ways. We have the picture of Daniel and his companions, strong and healthy and of a fine countenance because they refused to touch the liquor and luxurious foods that the king commanded to be given them.

Here we have the story of the Rechabites who, under the leadership of Jonadab, were early teetotalers, pledging themselves forever from abstinence from strong drink and accepting this abstinence discipline for their families as well.

This strong and healthy aspect of the Rechabites was not entirely associated with, or confined to, their abstinence from liquor. They lived in tents and had all the helpful and strengthening experiences of outdoor life.

We are not likely to emulate the Rechabites in refusing to dwell in houses, but we are perhaps reminded that abstinence from strong drink is only one phase of the foundation of healthful and happy living.

Temperance in its larger aspect implies an observance of all the laws for good health. It is the Christian's privilege and duty to redeem the time, even when the days and the surrounding environment are evil. Redempting the time means, in effect, buying up the days and making them one's own by right and profitable living.

The closing verses of the lesson emphasize the application of all this to the home. There can be no sound or true society, as there can be no favorable conditions for the individual life, except as good homes are maintained and relationships of love and loyalty are upheld in the family.

How seriously many homes of today have lapsed from that ideal, and how necessary it is that we should restore it if we would build strongly and well in church and state!

dent Wilson maneuvered the German authorities into complete surrender before an armistice was granted. It was that situation to which Hitler pointed in his speech when he said he never would allow his representatives to enter a conference with out strong military backing.

He has it now. The shoe was on the other foot at Munich.

It would be a completely novel situation, but it is conceivable that back in his noggins Der Fuehrer sees a possibility of a peace treaty before a war instead of after one, as is the usual custom.

It is unlikely he would agree to sit down in mass with the 31 nations President Roosevelt mentioned in his message. The staggering complexities of such a conference would bewilder even Mr. Hitler. But he suggested the possibility of conferences with the 31 nations, one at a time.

It would not be utterly onesided. Each nation would likely have British-French support to put starch in its back.

A quick test is likely to come up in the case of Poland. Hitler in his speech demanded a right of way to East Prussia across Poland's right of way to the sea. England has promised Poland help if she feels her independence threatened.

If the Duchess of Windsor sold the feminine world on the theory that life begins at 40, Tarbell, the writer, ought to convince us that life may still be going strong at 80.

Miss Tarbell is 81, though her age is certainly not the most important thing about her.

The important things are that she has just finished her autobiography, which the critics are praising as a fine piece of work, and that she is stepping into the new field of teaching. She is giving a course in writing at Allegheny College, where she was one of the first women students back in the '70's.

Miss Tarbell's refusal to take to a corner and be an old lady is a fine lesson both for the women who are staying at home bringing up a family, and for the women whose profession is her life.

The average mother sees the last of her children leave home by the time she is 50 or so. Chances are, she has many years still ahead of her.

RAISING A FAMILY

By Olive Roberts Barton

Any Growing Child Loves "Secrets"

Right under the top soil of this big earth there lies a layer of oddments that must tickle the skin of Mother Earth. Buried treasure that even the tiny pirates themselves have long forgotten. You planted some of it, so have I. And long ago we both forgot that someone was accused of stealing when the real culprit was busily eating his oatmeal in perfect innocence or sleeping the sleep of the just.

Memory is a short thing with a little child. Yesterday was last week and last week was yesterday. Tomorrow is something that never comes.

Like most other puzzling problems of little children, this one bothers young mothers to distraction. Jimmy is going to be a sneek and a thief, she thinks, and her heart sinks with shame. He can't even tell the truth when he's found out.

Of course, there is such a thing as example. If a child sees on her child deliberately hide something, then he too may hide a clue to mischief to keep from being discovered.

However, seldom does a very small child "steal" and hide things. He simply loves to have a secret to himself that no one else knows, not even his mother.

It belongs with other traits of this period, constantly surprising the child with his growing importance as a person. He is doing a lot of experimenting to prove that he is independent, alone in his thinking.

Maybe he will take mother into his confidence and whisper nothings in her ear. He will say, "Now don't you tell." Between them now they know that baby drank all her milk. He can't invent much, so he makes a secret of the obvious. Sometimes he hides him-

Montgomery-Sikes Will Meet Friday

Bout Rained Out Thursday Night—Big Crowd Is Disappointed

Rained out Thursday night, the scheduled 10-round fight for the Southern heavyweight championship between Bob Sikes of Pine Bluff, defending champion, and Lloyd Montgomery of Bauxite, will be held at the American Legion stadium Friday night, weather permitting. Promoter Leslie Wolfe said the fight would be deferred indefinitely if rain again interfered.

The postponement disappointed hundreds of fans, many of whom had traveled as far as 150 miles for the fight. Fans had formed a long line at both the front and rear entrance gates an hour before the stadium was opened.

At the official weighing-in in the office of John Cantrell, secretary of Arkansas Athletic Association Thursday afternoon, Sikes scaled 190 and Montgomery, 180. Mr. Cantrell said he would dispense with another weighing-in, but the fighters would take another physical examination.

Sikes and Montgomery good-naturedly laughed off the postponement but Managers Ed ("Pappy") Stein and Harry McDermott expressed displeasure.

PITTSBURGH—Harold Joseph Traynor says he hasn't seen a short-stop like Eddie Miller in years, and the Pittsburgh pilot has seen quite a few since he first slid into a Pirate uniform 19 years ago.

Traynor explains that the new short-stop of the Boston Bees pulled a couple of plays on the Buccaneers that knocked him right out of the coach's box.

"How many shortstops are there today who can run to the right, back-hand the ball and turn and throw runners out at first base?" asks Pie.

"Mighty few."

"Yet Miller makes it look easy."

Edward R. Miller is a well-built Pittsburgh product and right-hand nitter who swatted a long ball in batting in 80 runs and compiling an average of .290 for the Yankees' Kansas City subsidiary in 1938.

"Any club could have had Miller when the Yankees organization decided to dispose of him after some debate, but it was old Bob Quinn of the Hub who dug up $50,000 in cash and players."

To date, Miller looks like the outstanding infield recruit of the year. Traynor professes not to be worried about the Corsairs who folded up with such dramatic suddenness last year.

"Chatting with the personable New Englander, you gather that it is because he agrees with the rest . . . that his outfit hasn't much to beat in the National League."

Vander Meer hasn't picked up Tricks New York is having trouble with in infield, George Myatt has been a

TALE OF THE TURF

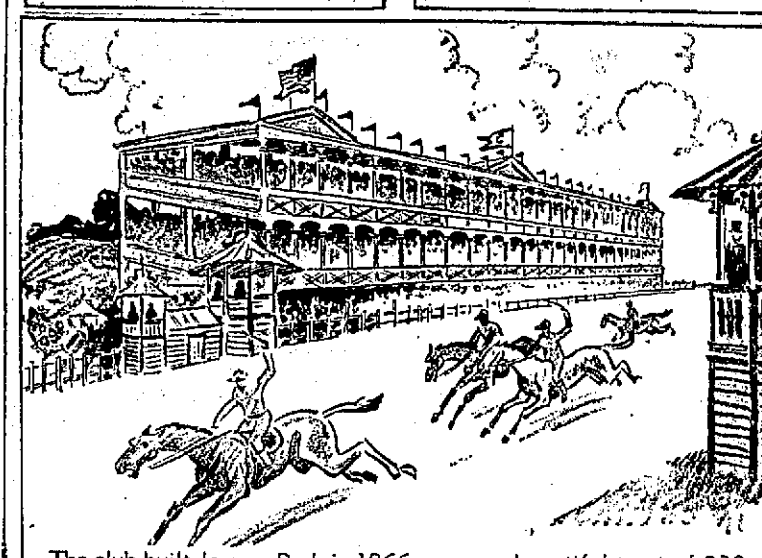

No. 9—The American Jockey Club

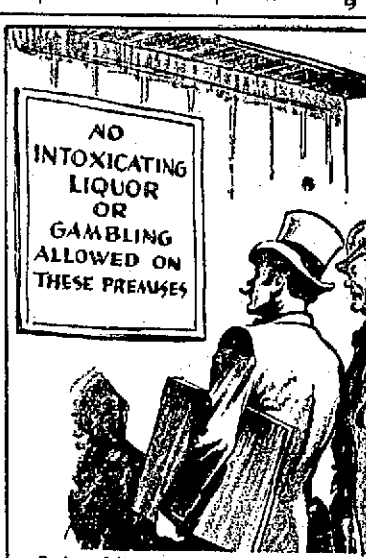

Leonard W. Jerome formed the American Jockey Club. It became the self-appointed board of control in the east.

History of the Running Horse in This Country Told in Sketches by Art Krenz

The club built Jerome Park in 1866 . . . on a beautiful tract of 230 acres in Westchester county, N. Y. The sport was conducted on a high plane. The venture won the approval of those who set the tone of social life. For 20 years the fame of its meetings went far and wide.

disappointment at third base. Bill Terry had to take on Tony Lazzeri. Bill Jurgis is fielding well, but his hitting is only fair.

"Zeke Bonura will hit," says Traynor, "but he's no fawn around first base . . . fields like a man picking up pieces of broken plate."

As Traynor points out, Carl Hubbell is the Giants' key man . . . still the meal ticket.

"If Hub can win, they'll be tough," he asserts. "If Hub can't I'm afraid they won't be going anywhere in a hurry." Hub got off to a promising start by the way.

Traynor suspects that the Reds will give the Pirates the stiffest opposition. McKee's worries were lessened when Johnny Vander Meer finally came to the help of Paul Derringer, Bucky Walters and Whitey Moore.

Nobody seems to know what's wrong but outside of the one start Vander Meer hasn't looked as well as he did in 1938.

"It couldn't be that he wasn't getting the coaching, for everybody knows McKee spends a lot of time with pitchers," asserts Traynor, "but our hitters say Vander Meer hasn't picked up the little tricks that mark the difference between a green and experienced hand."

Batting Slump Is Unknown To Medwick
Traynor wishes that someone would remind Joe Medwick that there is no law against going into a batting slump. Ducky doesn't seem to have heard the word.

Johnny Mize was no ball of fire on the Cardinals' swing through the east, but Medwick kept the Red Birds in the thick of things. Now that Mize has started to hit again the enemy can expect double trouble from St. Louis.

Most everybody fears that the Cubs are about to fall apart and that it may be Gabby Hartnett's head before long, but Traynor isn't so sure.

"Any team is dangerous that can throw pitchers like Bill Lee, Clay Bryant, Gene Lillard and Larry French at you," says the Pittsburgh manager. "And Vance Page won for the Cubs the other day."

Traynor swung back to Eddie Miller of the Bees.

"Shortstop like Miller," he mused. "You can count on one hand and have enough fingers left to dunk a doughnut."

SERIAL STORY

DATE WITH DANGER

BY HELEN WORDEN

COPYRIGHT, 1939, NEA SERVICE INC.

Yesterday, Mary writes her first story, the death of Janice French. Then she decides to return to the Dove night club but she is up against a couple of killers.

CHAPTER IX
THE dining room of the Plaza was deserted when Mary and Ladd walked in. Bus boys had not yet finished setting the tables.

"Good morning, Mr. Ladd," the headwaiter hurried forward. "It's quite all right. We have just opened the doors." He smiled apologetically. "But our guests seem to follow the Continental custom of breakfasting in their rooms."

He led the way to a table overlooking Central Park.

"That man's a diplomat," commented Ladd. "He didn't bat an eye at our evening clothes."

Mary smiled. "He used to work at Zelli's in Paris. He still thinks Americans wear their evening clothes at breakfast."

"But they've usually been for a drive through the Bois. And we've come from the morgue."

Ladd studied the menu. "What about kippered herring or broiled kidneys? I think we've earned a man-sized breakfast after a night like that."

"All right. I'll break my rule," Mary smiled. "I never take anything but orange juice and black coffee, but kippered herring is a weakness."

Ladd gave their orders to the waiter, then leaned back in his chair and lit a cigarette. "I'm at peace with the world," he said lazily.

"Even if we haven't solved the mystery of Janice French and Duke Martin?"

"Yes," he paused. He didn't know why but Mary seemed exceedingly pleasant to rest his eyes upon. "That doesn't mean I won't be raising the devil in another hour over it, but right now I'd rather think of you."

MARY didn't question his remark. Instead she looked out the window. Then she turned her eyes full on him. He had never appreciated their beauty before. They were like serene, dark, cool pools.

"And I would rather talk about Janice," she said. "I can't get her out of my mind."

He liked her voice. It was rich and deep and throaty. "Talk about anything you want to," he said good-naturedly. "What do you think started Janice on her double life?"

But when he said goodbye an hour later in front of her home it was with a curious sense of dissatisfaction. It did not comfort his ego that she had entirely forgotten him in the excitement of the French story. While her enthusiasm was a credit to her, it was hardly flattering in this instance. He repeated to himself that he was not in the least in love with her. No man could love a girl like that. They might be friends but never sweethearts. He was annoyed with her for making him realize this truth. Yet he could not get her out of his mind.

Instead of taking the taxi to his apartment, he dismissed it and swung toward Fifth Avenue. He would walk home. He reached in his pocket for his pipe. As he puffed on it, he decided that he was suffering from nothing more than wounded vanity.

The morning air felt cool and crisp. He took a deep breath. It was going to be a lovely day. Cold perhaps, but healthy after that stormy weather. He had not walked down Fifth Avenue in the morning for years. It recalled to him those first struggling days when he had come to New York a shy, eager boy, impatient for success. Women had not been different to his charm then, but could he say as much today? He frowned and reviewed his past.

Born in Philadelphia, 40 years old. Unmarried. Set in his ways. Quick-tempered. Life started for him when he skipped the senior year in Harvard to enlist. Barely 19, he saw a month's fighting before the Armistice. He stayed in Paris and drifted into journalism. His first job was on the Herald. Then New York—the old World. The Sun.

He thought of the nights he'd worked till three and four in the morning as a cable editor. He saw the copy desk. Heard the click of telegraph instruments and felt dog tired again as he recalled those tramps across town to the subway in the dawn, after the cables closed down. He remembered the sudden despair that had driven him to ship as a sailor on a boat bound for Syria. And he thought of the day two years later when he returned, tough, hardened and healthy, but broke, and slept in City Hall Park. The Gazette had taken him back. It gave him no satisfaction now to know that he was managing the paper. He puffed on his pipe. What had life made him—a misanthrope—a recluse?

BITTER as his thoughts were, they seemed constantly to be receding. His most vivid interest was not himself. Instead, he was
